

Techstars has announced the first cohort of its AI program in Montreal.

Announced in March, Techstars and Real Ventures partnered to launch the AI-specific program in the city, which boasts a strong AI ecosystem, including companies like Element AI and a growing presence of labs from Facebook, Google, and Samsung.

The ten selected companies will spend three months in the program, before ending with a Demo Day on December 5.

“At the heart of every Techstars program is a group of strong partners and mentors,” managing director Bruno Morency wrote in a blog post. “We’re grateful for the enthusiasm with which our locally community responded to our call, as well as the strong interest people from out of town showed for contributing to Techstars Montreal as mentors.”

You can read the full article on Betakit.

Share this:

- Click to share on Twitter \(Opens in new window\)
- Click to share on Facebook \(Opens in new window\)
- Click to share on LinkedIn \(Opens in new window\)